Transition Services

Texas Workforce Solutions is comprised of the Texas Workforce Commission, 28 local workforce development boards and our service-providing partners. Together we provide workforce education, training and support services, including vocational rehabilitation assistance for the people of Texas.

Adolescents who are blind or visually impaired have brighter futures today than at any time in history.

- Advances in technology make it possible for them to live, learn and work alongside their peers.
- There are many excellent resources to help youth who are blind achieve their fullest vocational potential.
- Powerful laws protect their rights to education, employment and access to their communities.

The Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) and the Rehabilitation Act are just two laws that help blind or visually impaired students prepare for the transition from school to adult life, employment and independence. These laws are in place to ensure that services and supports for transitioning students who are blind or visually impaired are coordinated among agencies to help the student move from school to post-school activities.

Texas Workforce Solutions-Vocational Rehabilitation Services (TWS-VRS) provides transition services to students who are blind or visually impaired to help them make the transition from school to the world of work.

Building a Foundation of Confidence

Transition planning is student-centered. Its success relies on the collaboration between the transition team and the support systems available to them. In addition to the student and his or her family, this transition team includes a combination of professional and nonprofessional members who are interested in the success of the student and may consist of the transition counselor, educational staff, specialists from TWC or the educational system, or any other members of the community who can provide support and assistance.

Transition planning activities and services bring together those resources and supports that promote the achievement of independence and vocational success. The sooner planning can be initiated, the sooner supports and services can be coordinated to achieve the goals of the student.

TWS-VRS begins transition planning and services for students with vision-related disabilities at age 10. The transition counselor works with the admissions, review and dismissal committee (ARD) to plan and develop long term vocational objectives and independent living goals that are consistent with the interests, abilities, strengths and informed choices of each student

Core Services

TWS-VRS offers a wide range of transition services associated with six major skill areas. Think of them as stepping stones to an independent, productive and satisfying life.

Adjustment to blindness: Counselors familiarize families with diagnostic procedures, medical treatments and other things they need to know to support their youth. Services are designed to equip the youth with coping and self-advocacy skills to boost confidence and self-esteem as he or she adjusts to living with a visual impairment.

Independent living (IL) skills: IL services promote independence and self-sufficiency as the youth matures. The family and transition counselor identify services that help the student become as independent as possible in everyday life — at home, in school and at work.

Communication: With strong communication skills, youth who are blind or have a visual impairment can thrive at home, at school, at work and in the community. Transition services promote development of a variety of skills including reading, writing and using Braille and other techniques, using assistive technology and accessing information.

Travel: Orientation and mobility skills enable adolescents to safely navigate and explore the world around them and to join their peers in social and community activities.

Support systems: Transition services help youth and families connect with a wide range of community support systems, such as peer, parent and sibling support groups, advocacy organizations and educational groups.

Vocational development: Vocational exploration begins at an early age and involves the whole family. Our program promotes the development of organizational and problem-solving skills and assists the youth in career development and exploration.

What families say about Transition Services

“The information that I have gained will empower me to help my son transition into the world and workforce, as well as in school and perhaps college.”

“The services have helped the whole family. They have made us aware of resources that we had no idea were available and they helped us with our children’s ARDs, with workshops and enrichment activities that help the whole family to bond and feel like we are not alone in this struggle. They have been a blessing to our family.”

“They have helped me deal with my son’s blindness by introducing me to blind people who are very successful in the work field. They have given my son a chance to see he is not the only one in the world who is blind. They are always someone who I can count on to encourage me and my family.”
